A STRONG BOY.

New York Bar-Rooms.

FOR THE FEW DIMES HE PICKS UP

In Places of Public Resort He Performs the Most Astounding Feats of Strength-A Persistent Cigarette Smoker and Objects Very Strongly to Hard Work-In Looks Unlike the Heroules that He Is-Some of His Wonderful Acts.

Emil Jarrow, of New York, is but eighteen years of age. He smokes cigarettes persistently and has an equally persistent objection to hard work. These characteristics are not uncommon in boys of that age, but young Jarrow, in spite of them, is possessed of such strength as to make him even now a formidable rival to Sandow and the best of the "strong men" known to the public, and far superior to the larger number of the modern Samsons, Hercules, and "iron men" now performing. He has no manager nor press agent, and his field of operations is confined to barrooms, where for a few dimes he barrooms, where for a few dimes he may pick up, he will perform the most extraordinary feats of strength. One of these feats was as follows: The proprietor of the saloon, a man weighing 240 pounds, sat in an ordinary chair. Jarrow grasped the upper back rung with his right hand and lifted chair and man and held them straight out at arm's length.

Jarrow is 5 feet 7 inches in height and weighs 132 pounds. His biceps measure 14½ inches. Both arms are equally strong. His unexpanded chest measures 38 inches, fully expanded, 4½ inches. A peculiarity of his wonderful strength is that it is not due to cultivation, but seems to have been congenital. He has never practiced in a gymnasium for any length of time and has never studied the methods of professional strong men. He has never used a harness of any kind; indeed, he has never had sufficient money to buy one. He has not tried any of the chest supporting feats now familiar to the public, but relies entirely upon the immense strength of his arms. He lifts directly has not tried any of the closes supporting feats now familiar to the public, but relies entirely upon the immense strength of his arms. He lifts directly a dead weight of 850 pounds. A favorite feat of his is to suspend a forty-pound weight to his wrist and then write his name on the wall at the level of his shoulder. Another feat is to pilo five chairs, each weighing twenty pounds, upon a sixth, and, grasping the lower round with his hand turned upward, lift the whole awkward mass, weighing 120 pounds, from the floor and raise it above his head without changing the position of his hand.

In appearance Jarrow reveals nothing of this remarkable strength. His face is pale and unhealthy looking, probably due to his inveterate cigarette smoking.

due to his inveterate cigarcule smoking. His neck is long and slender, in strong contrast to those of most athletes and puglists. In repose his muscles do not bulge out his coat sleeves, and in general he looks like the ordinary bar-room lounger. He is thoroughly satisfied to give his exhibitions in saloons, and thus give his exhibitions in saloons, and thus earn enough for his bed, a meal, and plenty of cigarettes. He is apparently not vain of his strength and looks on it merely as a fortunate possession, whereby he can gratify his modest desires at the minimum of work. Unless some clever manager can gain sufficient control over the boy to induce him to cultivate his wonderful power and develop if to the utmost he will probably continue as a barroom wonder. Should be determine, under proper management, to go ahead he will doubtless, when he attains his full growth, relegate the feats of Sandow ond Milo of Crotona to the, second rank. give his exhibitions in saloons, and thus econd rank.

GRAND DEMONSTRATION At Aurora in Celebration of the Victory of Secrial Correspondence of the Intelligences AUROBA, W. Va., Nov. 17 .- Last night was a scene of brilliancy seldom, if ever, witnessed in this flourishing town and vicinity. Nearly all the residences and public houses were illuminated ex-tonsively. Bunting was the chief drapery, and a blaze of light shed its lustre all over the place and surround-ing bills. Bands of music paraded the streets, playing American and other patriotic tunes. Promptly at 7 o'clock the parade formed at Mr. McCrumb's store, headed by the marshal and band. Torches flashed in all the streets as the horsemen hurried to join in the pa-rade; transparencies flashed forth at different points in the procession, and and public houses were illuminated ex-different points in the procession, and among them were noted the following:

"The Democratic cry in 1892 was:
"We will hold control for fifty years."
Where are you now?"
"The solid south broken and cracked all over." "Tariff reform degenerates to what? Nobody knows." "Can't fool the people with free trade any more.

"Protection Dayton knocked free trade Wilson out of sight."

"Republican party a friend of the people—Good bye Wilson and free trade."
"West Virginia redeemed."
"Hurrah for protection and American industries."
As the cavalcade started down the protect with hands playing, horns main street with bands playing, horns main street with banks playing, notes blowing, torches flashing, horses prancing with delight, flags flying in the blaze, and the shouts of the concourse of people who lined the side-walks, it was indeed a beautiful sight. The worthy sires, the noble sons, and the level worthers and desuptors of the loyal mothers and daughters of Aurora all joined in giving praise for the redemption of their beautiful mounthe redemption of their beautiful modi-tain state.

The fine hotel and residence of Mr.
J. H. Shaffer, a summer resort, where many people have enjoyed the pure mountain air, and restored thereby to health and strength, was a blaze of light. On the fifth floor, in front, was a transperency with the following words and figures: "Wost Virginia's Repub-lican majority 13,000;" which could easi-ly have been read from the hilltops.
